

NYC Public Schools Tsunami Relief Fund & IRC
www.theIRC.org/nycschool

Director of the IRC's health programs Dr. Rick Brennan (center) helps transport a young woman injured in the tsunami to the hospital for an operation.

NYC Public Schools Tsunami Relief Fund & IRC
www.theIRC.org/nycschool

IRC doctor Rachel Moresky treats an infant at Tanabasir Camp who has been suffering from a high fever

NYC Public Schools Tsunami Relief Fund & IRC
www.theIRC.org/nycschool

Loading relief supplies onto an IRC boat in Banda Aceh harbor

NYC Public Schools Tsunami Relief Fund & IRC
www.theIRC.org/nycschool

Indonesian kids hate getting shots too!
An IRC health worker inoculates a young tsunami survivor against measles

NYC Public Schools Tsunami Relief Fund & IRC
www.theIRC.org/nycschool

IRC water and sanitation specialist Frank Broadhurst is checking the drinking water to make sure it's safe to drink.

Unclean drinking water can make lots of people sick after a natural disaster.

NYC Public Schools Tsunami Relief Fund & IRC
www.theIRC.org/nycschool

IRC child specialist Catherine Wiesner distributes books to tsunami survivors in a special 'kid friendly' space the IRC created just for kids!

NYC Public Schools Tsunami Relief Fund & IRC
www.theIRC.org/nycschool

The IRC's Tom Smith unloads water and sanitation equipment on the beach in Calang, Indonesia. This equipment will be used to clear sea water out of the town's drinking well and to keep it clean and free of germs that can make people sick.

NYC Public Schools Tsunami Relief Fund & IRC
www.theIRC.org/nycschool

After the tsunami, many Indonesians needed a place to stay until their homes are rebuilt. These folks are living in a former warehouse in Tanabasisir, Indonesia. The IRC is providing emergency medical services to these tsunami survivors.

NYC Public Schools Tsunami Relief Fund & IRC
www.theIRC.org/nycschool

The IRC has to use 4-wheelers, boats trucks and even helicopters to reach the remotest areas of Aceh province because lots of roads and bridges were washed away by the tsunami.

NYC Public Schools Tsunami Relief Fund & IRC
www.theIRC.org/nycschool

IRC doctor Rachel Moresky examines a patient who suffered internal injuries from the tsunami

NYC Public Schools Tsunami Relief Fund & IRC
www.theIRC.org/nycschool

Outbreaks of infectious diseases like measles are a major risk to children during humanitarian emergencies

NYC Public Schools Tsunami Relief Fund & IRC
www.theIRC.org/nycschool

Story-telling, kick ball and even homework can help the youngest tsunami survivors cope

NYC Public Schools Tsunami Relief Fund & IRC
www.theIRC.org/nycschool

Even grown-ups have to go to school! These Indonesian mothers are learning special ways to keep germs from making their families sick.